

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

A cold westerly airstream will cover Scotland. Showers of a wintry mix will feed eastwards across much of southern and eastern Scotland possibly leading to salt wash-off and therefore an increasing risk of icy stretches on Thursday evening into early Friday.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 15:00 on Thu, 19th Dec 2013 until 09:00 on Fri, 20th Dec 2013

A cold westerly airstream will bring a wintry mix of showers through the rest of Thursday, overnight into Friday morning. As road temperatures fall after dark this will lead to an increasing risk of icy stretches. In addition these showers will lead to some accumulations of snow. By day these should be mainly confined to ground above 200 m although some temporary slushy falls are possible to lower levels in heavier showers. On Thursday evening into early Friday, slight accumulations of 1-2 cm are possible locally with up to 5 cm above 200 m.

Drivers should be aware of the possibility of difficult driving conditions and minor disruption to travel.
